RUBRIC FOR ORAL PRESENTATIONS – STEM (FIRST YEAR COLLEGE)

	Full Marks	High Distinction	Distinction	Credit	Pass	N (Just a fail, e.g. 40%)	N / Very poor
Appropriate organising structure for professional communication		• Organisation of information is clear, logical, appropriately sequenced and consistent throughout the presentation • Introduction and background concisely communicates the purpose of the presentation through succinct and specific aims/objectives • Results and valid interpretation of relevant information are clearly linked the aims/objectives and thoroughly discussed in the context of relevant literature • Justification of conclusion/ recommendation comprises a concise account of key findings that link back to the aims/objectives	• Organisation of information is clear, consistent and appropriately sequenced with an introduction, discussion/results and conclusion • Introduction and background clearly communicates the purpose of the presentation through aims and relevant objectives • Results and interpretation of information are linked the aims/objectives and discussed in the context of relevant literature • Justification of conclusion/ recommendations clearly based on material presented	• Organisation of information is clear, and mostly appropriately sequenced with an introduction and conclusion • Introduction and background communicates the purpose of the presentation through aims and mostly relevant objectives • Results and interpretation of information are mostly linked the aims/objectives and mostly discussed in the context of literature • Justification of conclusion/ recommendations relate to material presented	• Attempts to organise information is evident • Introduction and background communicates the purpose of the presentation • Attempts to link results and/or interpretation of information to the aims/objectives and occasionally discussed in the context of literature • Reasoning behind conclusion/ recommendations occasionally weak	• Limited attempt at organising information in a coherent order • Introduction and background communicates most of the key elements • Limited attempt to link results and/or interpretation of information to the aims/objectives and limited acknowledgement of literature • Reasoning behind conclusion/ recommendations un-clear and/or incomplete	• Poor organising of content • The purpose and key elements are difficult to identify in the introduction and/or background • Limited/no attempt to link results and/or interpretation of information to the aims/objectives • No attempt to justify conclusions/ recommendations
Informative application of discipline-specific content	•	• Covers topic thoroughly, includes illustrative examples • Discipline-specific terms are well-defined and integrated into the presentation	• Covers topic, thoroughly • Discipline-specific terms are well-defined and used appropriately • All information gained from external sources is appropriately referenced with	• Includes essential information and some supporting details • Discipline-specific terms are defined and used appropriately • Most information gained from external sources is	• Includes most essential information and some supporting details • Most discipline-specific terms are defined, application is occasionally incorrect	• Includes some essential information with critical details missing • Inconsistent use and application of discipline-specific language • Some information gained from external	• Essential information is missing • Discipline-specific language largely unused • Information gained from external sources is

		• All information gained from external sources is appropriately referenced with most accurately following the reference style • Complements and summarises key elements in the report highlighting significance	inconsistent application of the reference style • Complements and summarises key elements in the report	referenced with an attempt to apply the reference style • Complements and summarises the report	• Most information gained from external sources is referenced, difficult to identify which reference style is used • Attempts to complement and/or summarise the report	sources is referenced, difficult to identify which reference style is used • Limited attempts to complement or summarise the report	mostly un-acknowledged • Relationship between the report and presentation are difficult to identify
Delivery is appropriate with effective audience engagement, and time management	•	• Clear, strong voice with appropriate inflections emphasising key messages • Responds accurately to all questions with relevant explanations and contextualisation / elaboration • Keeps eye contact with audience. Minimal reliance on notes • Efficient management of presentation and audience response time	• Clear, strong voice (i.e. all audience members hear the presentation) with a variety of inflections • Responds accurately to all questions with relevant explanations • Keeps eye contact with audience. Minimal reliance on notes • Efficient management of presentation time with topics reflecting their relative importance	• Clear, audible voice (i.e. most audience members hear the presentation), but occasionally monotone • Responds accurately to all questions • Keeps eye contact with audience most of the time. Frequent exclusive reliance on notes and/or slides • Manages presentation within time limits	• Mostly clear voice, occasionally delivered at a distracting pace (i.e. too slow or too quick) and/or monotone • Responds to most questions with rudimentary answers (not always clearly or completely) and fails to elaborate • Makes intermittent eye contact. Frequent exclusive reliance on notes and/or slides • Uneven presentation to manage time	• Quiet voice or pronunciation often indistinct. (i.e. audience members at the back of the room have difficulty hearing the presentation) • Responds to few questions, some incomplete and/or incorrect answers • Rarely makes eye contact with audience. Almost total reliance on notes and/or slides • Poor time management	• Quiet voice and pronunciation indistinct (i.e. audience members frequently have difficulty hearing the presentation) • Unable to answer some questions (other responses are incomplete and/or incorrect) • Does not look at audience; reads notes and/or slides • Poor time management disrupting others' schedule
Relevant and appropriate support material	•	• Supporting material reinforces message, clean and simple layout/structure, enhancing communication of ideas	• Supporting material is informative and effectively reinforces message	• Supporting material reinforces message	• Supporting material relevant; sometimes difficult to view/engage with, (i.e. some graphics or special effects distract)	• Supporting material is very difficult to view, layout is cluttered and confusing	• Audience unable to engage with supporting material
Effective, cohesive teamwork	•	• Functions effectively as a cohesive team with clear links and coordination between participating members	• Evidence of cohesive team function with some links between members' contributions	• Some evidence of cohesive team function and coordination between group members' contributions	• Limited evidence of team function and /or coordination between members' contributions	• Limited evidence of coordination between members' contributions	• Insufficient evidence of team functioning/ coordination

		• All participants contributing equally to the presentation	• Evidence of equal contributions of group members	• Some evidence of equal contributions in the group	• Minimal evidence of reasonably balanced contributions between group members	• Variable contributions between group members	• Highly inconsistent contribution between group members