Managing your references

- Use quick citation tool on Library Search
- Use EndNote
- Link pdf's to EndNote (journal articles)
- Export references from the Library Search, a database, or Google Scholar into EndNote

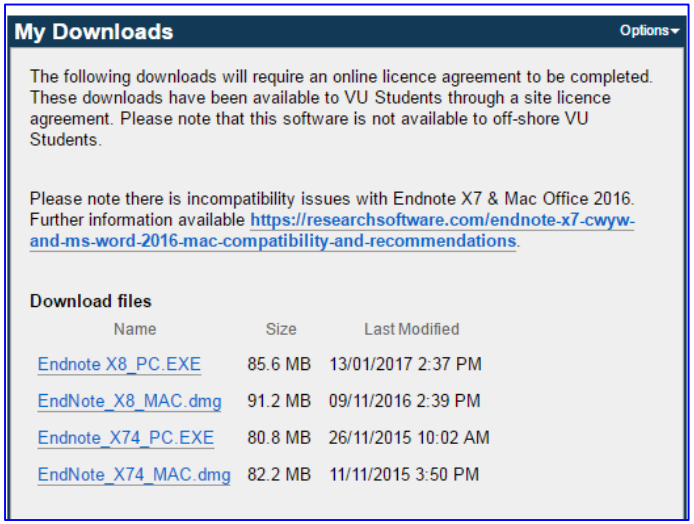

EndNote

- Stand-alone software, operates independently of a computer system used
- Formats in-text citations and bibliography according to VU referencing guidelines
- Add a reference to a library: manually; exporting, that is, importing from library systems; copying from another EndNote library, connecting from EndNote (not suggested)
- Has over 2000 referencing styles:
  - Use ‘Harvard Aust 2010’ style

Install the software

Managing your EndNote Library

- One EndNote Library is recommended (make sure you back it up regularly)
- You can create custom groups within the EndNote library to manage references thematically
- Once you cite from one EndNote library in a word document, you can't easily change EndNote libraries and have references inserted from another EndNote library

- Groups
- Labels
- Research notes
- Formatted citations using Edit and Manage Citation(s): (Author, Year), (Author), (Author, Year, page numbers), (cited in Author, Year)
- Unformatted citations {Author, Year #No.}

Add PDF's

- Select references, 'References', 'Find Full Text'
- Manually: right click, 'File Attachments', 'Attach file'
- To view: right click, 'File Attachments', 'Open File'

Backing up your library

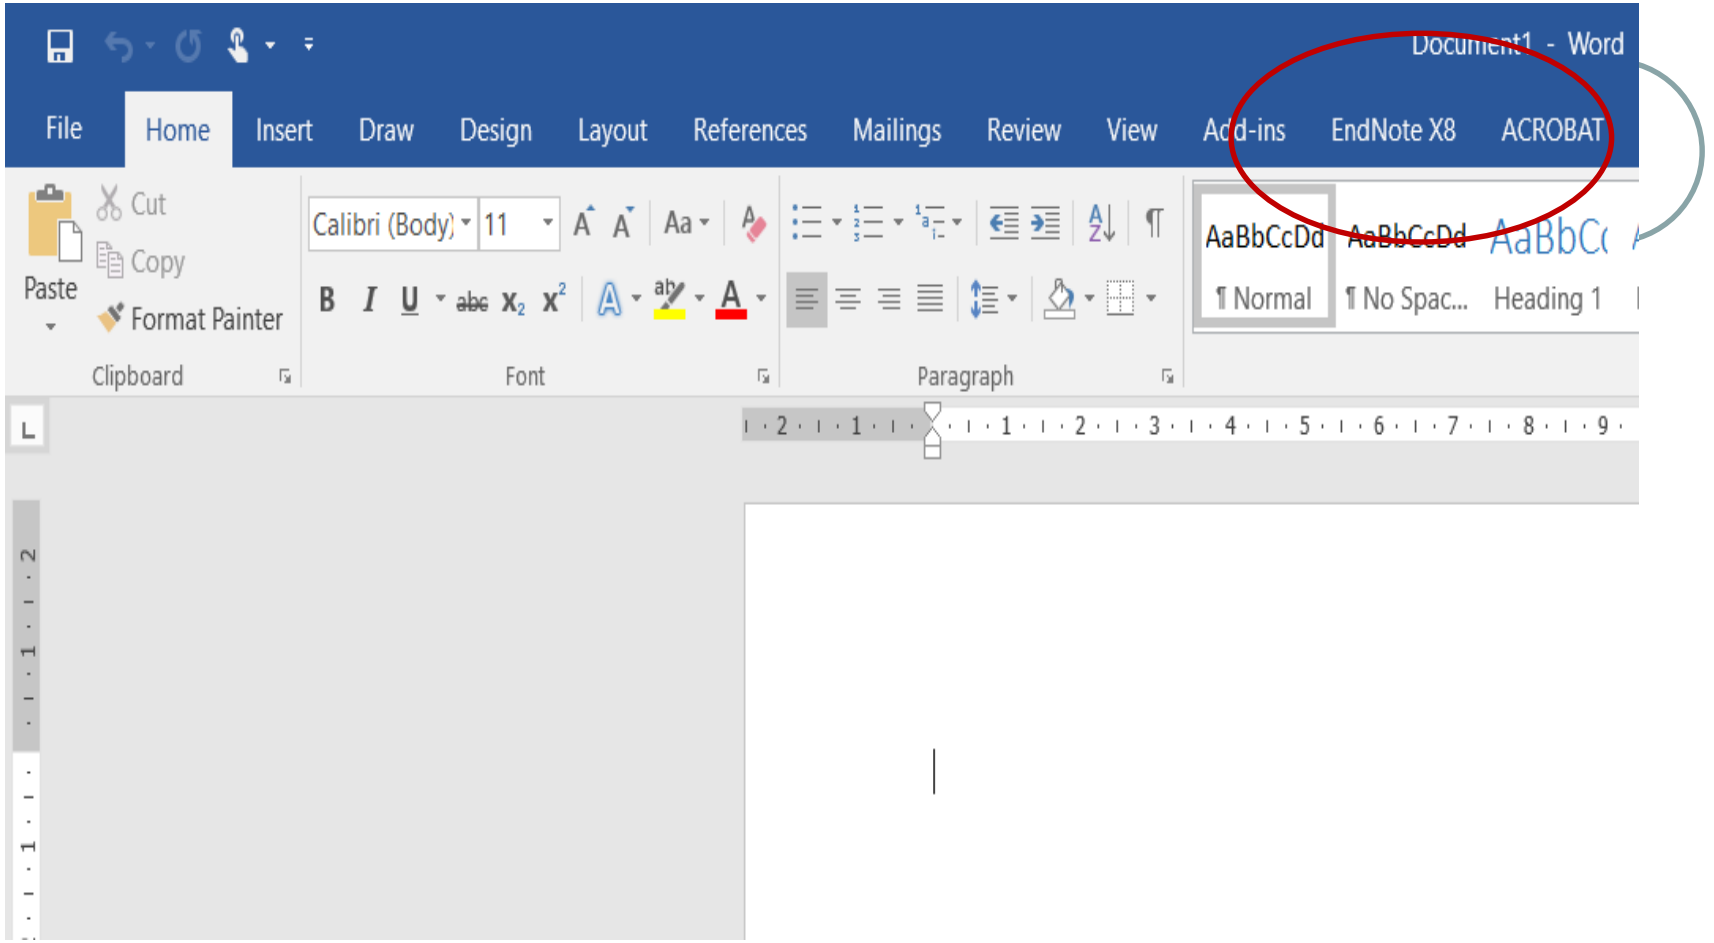

- EndNote groups references into “libraries” with the file extenstion ‘.enl’ and a corresponding ‘data’ folder

File	Type	Function
Library	.enl	Contains references
Data foler	.data	Supporting info: group structures, attached files and images

EndNote’s File > Save a Copy or EndNote’s File > Compressed Library

(both options combine .enl & .data files into a single file)
